KLING STUBBINS

FOR IMMEDIATE RELEASE

KlingStubbins teams with Sauer to win US Navy's Advanced Energetics Lab

RALEIGH, NC – November 3, 2008 – Design firm KlingStubbins and general construction company Sauer Inc. were awarded the design/build project for the Advanced Energetics Research Lab Complex – Phase 1, Naval Surface Warfare Center in Indian Head, Maryland.

This 12,000 SF, one-story lab facility will support research, development, testing, and evaluation in discovering technologies to enhance the warfighter's energetic capabilities. The building will be designed and constructed with highly sensitive specialty spaces for research and development activities.

The Advanced Energetics Research Lab, valued at approximately $9,355,000, marks the first design/build project for the KlingStubbins and Sauer team.
