Kling Promotes Raymond E. Doyle, PE, to Engineering Design Principal in Washington, DC

WASHINGTON, DC – October 17, 2006 – Kling, a full-service architecture, engineering, interior design, and planning firm, is pleased to announce the promotion of Raymond E. Doyle, PE, to Engineering Design Principal of the Washington, DC, office.

During his five years as Chief Mechanical Engineer at Kling, Mr. Doyle has been instrumental in the success of many projects, including the GSA/FDA White Oak Headquarters Consolidation, AstraZeneca Federal Government Affairs Office, and several projects for The Architect of the Capitol.

“Ray’s leadership in engineering has made a profound impact on many projects, from laboratory, biotechnology manufacturing, and data centers to corporate office projects. We look forward to advancing innovative engineering solutions under his direction utilizing Kling’s integrated Architecture, Engineering, and Interiors model,” commented Michael R. Lorenz, PE, Director of Engineering and Co-Chairman of Kling.

In his role as Engineering Design Principal, Mr. Doyle provides primary engineering leadership and oversight of the work on projects in the mechanical and electrical disciplines. He is highly regarded within the professional community for his expertise in the development of system concepts, engineering and economic data, and energy consumption analyses, in addition to the preparation of detailed construction documents and coordination of activities with other disciplines, outside agencies, and clients.

Mr. Doyle received a Bachelor of Science in Mechanical Engineering from the University of Maryland in 1994. He is a member of the International Society of Pharmaceutical Engineers and the American Society of Heating, Refrigerating and Air Conditioning Engineers.
